

System Architecture Overview

The platform is built using a modern web architecture that includes a Next.js frontend, an Express API server, and MongoDB for data storage.

Document files are stored in the filesystem and indexed by a background worker that extracts text content from each document.

Search queries are processed through a full-text index which allows fast retrieval of documents based on keywords or phrases.

Future improvements include vector search and AI-assisted document classification.